

Light in Dark Times
Isaiah 9:1-4; Matthew 4:12-23
Epiphany 3A St Thomas's Church 2017

As my children won't hesitate to tell you, when it comes to getting on board the world of technology.
I am a troglodyte...
not just slow - but glacial –
I have found it too often time-wasting, distracting, overwhelming, and in my line of work, much of the time unnecessary.
I thought I had done just fine till now without 600 apps
So I ignored it – and got behind – way behind in learning its true value and how to use it well... so far behind I was embarrassed to ask for help and my grandkids are too far away to be useful.

My life changed 2 weeks ago when David and I drove to Atlanta where he will be teaching at Emory for the semester.
A friend put WAZE on my phone to get us there.
For those of you who don't know, WAZE is an app that will tell you how to get anywhere.

It corrects your route when you go wrong and even tells you when there are cops ahead.

Best of all it's EASY! Even I can use it!

We got to depend on the voice of WAZE very quickly.

She saved us when we heard the weather report about the snow/ice storm coming across the south and we had to abruptly change our driving plans if we didn't want to get snowed in somewhere in South Carolina.

We drove and drove and drove south from DC towards Atlanta on the fringe of the freezing rain that was part of the storm we were trying to outrun.

It was dark by 4 pm and seeing out the windows became increasingly difficult.

We were vulnerable, exposed and somewhat unnerved.

This is not what we had planned – or what we expected.

WAZE was our voice of certainty,
our guide in the storm,

the voice of calm that guided us, set us straight when we went wrong and moved us from the darkness to a place of light and safety...
and a new adventure.

How many times have each of us individually and all of us collectively found ourselves in a place of deep darkness feeling overwhelmed, anxious and unnerved even terrified by the icy world around us.

For many of us, we are living in such a time right now.

But we are hardly the first people to have this experience.

Surely this was the case for beleaguered Israel in the 8th c when the Assyrian armies wielded their strength and worked their will against the defenseless and helpless and ill equipped people of the Northern kingdom.
It was a dark time for them when Isaiah prophesied :
the people who walked in darkness have seen a great light.

Those who lived in a land of deep darkness, on them light has shined.

What light? Though many people today believe that Isaiah prophesied the coming of Christ, most commentators agree that all we can say for sure is this:

the “light” to which the prophet refers is the light which is the power of God...

the power which creates possibilities that didn't exist, the light which guides the way through storms on unfamiliar roads and brings the vulnerable to a place of safety which is hope for salvation.

For the Israelites, according to theologian Walter Bruggeman, this concretely meant the military transformation which would end the threat of Assyrian occupation.

It meant the belief in the power of Yahweh to create well-being for those in jeopardy through a new Jerusalem king.

This was not the first time the Israelites were threatened.

They were under threat when captive to the Egyptians and finally led through the Red Sea to freedom.

They had lived through the Babylonian captivity in the 6th c

THIS was not the first time and it would not be the last.

But Isaiah's prophecy was – and remains - like the voice of WAZE the people who lived in darkness have seen a great light.

This was their hope in all things at all times.

In this new, unprecedented, stormy, anxious and uncertain time in our own American history, it is good to remember that we, too, have been through dark times before.

times of war (WWI, WWII, Korea, Vietnam, Iraq)

times of economic change (great depression, great recession) times of weak and controversial leadership, dark, fearful, uncertain, anxious times.

For those of you who are anxious now, you are not alone.

The latest polls show an astounding number of respondents uncertain and fearful of the future.

But again – we have been in dark times before and chances are we will be again.

The passage from Isaiah is important for US because as was true for the people of the northern kingdom of Israel, it is about more than dreaming about better days ahead.
It is about holding the light of hope in the power of God
when living under a sense of threat and even doom in a world beyond our control... a world which seems to have fallen into the hands of leaders who make ill-informed, selfish, sometimes unwise decisions... leaders for whom God seems not to be a part of their lives.

Our challenge now as Christians is to not allow ourselves to grow accustomed to walking around in the dark.

We who may now find ourselves walking in darkness have seen a great light, not a Jerusalem king but the son of God
the light Jesus Christ.

Jesus Christ who came among us as one of the forgotten, an immigrant, born to an unwed and poor mother seemingly a powerless person.

Our passage from Matthew reminds us that in his ministry, Jesus nonetheless stood in the face of the evils of hunger, blindness, poverty and death –

healing, feeding, restoring, bringing new life inaugurating GOD'S kingdom on earth..

He stood in the face of the systemic evil that violates any person or group of people.

And when the political and religious powers that reigned put him to death, it was an end – but not THE end.

He rose again, love defeating death, light obliterating darkness.

If you fear that the Christ light has been extinguished - or if you're puzzled about what that light looks like today, consider this:

the light of Christ looks like works of justice, mercy and kindness.

it looks like the millions who turned out across the country for this weekend's marches and rallies standing for and demanding human rights.

It looks like protesting the obscuring of truth, and the ignoring news organizations whose reporters don't say the right thing.

It looks like resisting the filling of the swamp with billionaires, and community organizing on behalf of society's powerless,

It looks like the Black Lives Matter movement, and the hard work of eliminating racial profiling improving community policing, and reducing unjust and unduly long prison sentences.

It looks like the sanctuary movement in cities and schools across the US.
and refugee resettlement as individuals and communities open their hearts and homes to traumatized immigrants looking only for peace and security.

It does not look like misogyny.

or demeaning people with disabilities.

or spending billions of dollars to build a wall to keep our neighbors out.

It does not look like jeopardizing health care for millions.

or refusing a decent minimum wage for millions of workers.

The great light of Christ we see every day looks like ordinary people called as Peter and Andrew, James and John were called – called as they are / from where they are / to be who they are ordinary people called to stand in solidarity and protest refusing to be complicit in the sin of evil and harm ordinary people called by the power of God to do extraordinary things, to BE the light of hope in the darkness.

We are ALL invited to follow Jesus – or I should say commanded.

After all Jesus did not say

“I wonder if you would consider the possibility of tagging along if you have the time and it is not too inconvenient.”

He did not invite us to text or twitter our opinions to a nameless public.

He invited personal encounters PRAYER and healing.

He invited listening to the other with open hearts and minds trying to stand in their shoes, not automatically angrily disagreeing

if the song the other sings is not your song.

It is Jesus, after all, who is at the center of the wheel of our lives and there will be differing points of view depending on where one stands.

Now more than ever we need to step out IN faith,
to step out ON faith...ABOVE ALL TO STEP OUT.... especially in this uncertain time, when the way ahead is unclear and the weather around us can often feel like freezing rain.

To follow Jesus means discipleship – and discipleship requires holding fast to Jesus the WAZE who directs our life and reorients us when we get off the path.

Discipleship requires active participation in the struggle for human rights and justice for all people.

Discipleship is the way to turn our despair into hope through prayer and action.

This is not to get into magic thinking.

Light doesn't always dispel the darkness
but it DOES dispel the fear of the darkness.

In the same way Jesus' presence with us doesn't always change the circumstances that create the fear in the immediate moment in time.

But God's presence and power in the world of God's creation, in Jesus present among us in the power of the Holy Spirit does lift the cloud of fear and anxiety and reminds us that God – not whatever partisan activity may be around us – is the ultimate truth of our lives.

So if you are in a time of darkness know you are not alone, don't be embarrassed if you feel alone and afraid ask a friend for the help when you need it Pray and strategize together.

Keep your Jesus app open so you walk in WAZE of Christ

The people who walked in darkness have seen a great light

He is our light – and he is our salvation. AMEN
